Gilmor Brown Has Pleasant Visit With Shaw

"What did George Bernard Shaw say," is, according to Gilmor Brown, the most oft asked question since his return Friday from an European trip.

Contrary to popular opinion, the famous Irish dramatist was easily accessible and the Pasadena Playhouse supervising director spent a three hour luncheon period with the playwright.

Other rich points of the Playhouse director's trip included visits to Stratford - upon - Avon, Comedie Francaise in Paris and a get-together of ex-playhousers in New York on October 2. Over 100, including Walter Hampden, Martha Graham and others who had played the Pasadena boards over the 21 year period, gathered at the Algonquin Hotel for the session.
