My dear Miss Mary Margaret McBride (Biggest Liar About Her Books):

I was quite surprised to receive your note of such abject apology. You did not blunder tactlessly in your question about Princess Margaret. It is simply a policy that we have established for ourselves in not discussing the royal family. I felt it was the least we could do for them, since they paid us such a great honor by coming to see us.

You did nothing world-shattering or that will make me fall into complete disfavor with my English friends. I assure you that it is not worth a moment's more of your time or energy worrying about it.

I hope to see you when we come back to New York; I had a most pleasant afternoon with our interview.
I'm sorry if in any way it caused you any undeserved embarrassment.

Sincerely,
