I

A cry arose from lands afar
O'er frightful seas of death and crime.
A cry from those engulfed in war,
The greatest tragedy of time.

America! America!
You great unselfish land
You rose as one when duty called
And bravely took your stand.
You gave your wealth, your precious blood,
And endless charity.
To free the world and share with all
Your glorious liberty.

II

Our bravest manhood, unafraid,
Gave all they had, more; no one can,
For some were maimed, while others made
The greatest sacrifice of man.
United States! United States!
You gallantly upheld,
The name our fathers nobly made
When they oppression felled.
And now as then, our soldiers fought,
To right, posterity,
And free the world and share with all
Our glorious liberty.

III

Through roar of cannon, smoke and flame,
Midst shells that crack through human wall
Our Stars and Stripes again became
The greatest, purest flag of all.
United States! America!
Your colors proudly waved,
When in the fight, through fire and steel,
Our flag was always saved.
Old Glory never faltered; nay,
It led; to victory,
To free the world and share with all,
Our glorious Liberty.
