The whole world to - day is a - weep - There's no use to - day in de - ny - ing, Be - cause all of Eu - rope's at war, And Wil - son's the man who is ing, This Coun - try's at last wide a - wake, To mil - lions of hearts that are keep - ing, The blood - shed and strife from our shore, With glo - ry and cry - ing, For help for their own coun - try's sake, We're fight - ing for hon - or up - hold - ing, The land of the brave and the true, And peace and for - ev - er, It's now up to us to a man, And so if you dare to re-vile - him, You slan-der the Red, White and Blue. if it is red blood that's in you, You'll jump in and help Un-cle Sam.

CHORUS

If you don't like our Pres-i - dent Wil - son, And you sneer at the things, he has met -

— What have you ev-er done for the free-dom we've won, Ex-cept to take all you can get, If you don't like the looks of Old Glo - ry If your heart does-n't feel du-ty's call, Then you're worse than the cur in the sto - ry, You knife the land that feeds us all. If you all.

SOMEWHERE SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE

by WM. VAUGHAN DUNBAR and SHELTON BROOKS

Look at the above little picture for a few minutes, and you'll understand what this new ballad "SOMEWHERE, SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE" is all about. The story is well told, and the music is exceptionally good—it's a ballad that will live in the history of song. France has again astonished the world—and we are all glad to sing her praises; either in speech or in song, and we know we can often accomplish more with a song than a sermon. You will show your appreciation for right by having a copy of this song in your home, where your personal friends can see it. When ordering the song, be sure you mention the writers' names, so that you'll be sure to get the right song
