"OUR COLORS" Grace K.Lowrey.

1

There used to be a golden dawn, that turned to azure sky,
There used to be a sunset glow, of crimson's deepest die;
There used to be rich fields of green, and flow'rs of ev'ry hue;
Now, the colors that we love are khaki, red, and and white and blue.

2

Our golden dawns are shadowed now by smoke of battles grim;
Our sunset's glow has lost its light, the war cloudsmake it dim;
And there are desert wasted lands, where flow'rs or verdure grew;
But the colors that wont spoil are khaki, red, and white, and blue!

3

So, rally to your Colors, now--for we shall win each war!
No, don't forget your colors now, no matter where you are!
They've always stood for liberty, neath East or Western sun;
For they are the colors that will last and never nevr run!

CHORUS.

These are our colors, now--
Khaki, red, white and blue;
They stand for liberty-
So glorious, staunch and true;
We will rally to these colors--
Our allegiance we'll renew--
For they are our colors now-
Khaki, red, and white, and blue.
