"There's Forty Eight More Stars To-Night!" M. A. Hannum.

1

Oh yes, there's forty eight more Stars to-night!
And if you'll look you'll see that I am right;
You'll never want to see a prettier sight;
As all these Stars with Stripes that are so bright;
By breezes wafted, kissed by evening light;
As softly as the flowers wet with dew;
There's forty eight more Stars for me and you--
Who can deny that sight so grand and true.

2

Oh yes, there's forty eight more Stars to night;
Upon the Banner that floats through the night;
It signales through the blast: "Ye all are free!"
It lightens loads of weak and Kings' decree;
It stands a guard at the gates of the world;
We'll reverence it where it is unfurled;
It is our Saviour, keeping us so true;
Our grand old Flag, our great Red, White, and Blue.

CHORUS.

Oh, Stripes of flames, with the Red of dawn;
And a White like the breakers that race;
It shineslike a cluster of wonderful stars--
And laughs at Autocracy's waste.
