O YOU WILL COME BACK TO ME! A song.

Words and music by E. M. DeKonza.

He had heard Duty's call,
He had given up all;
Not in loyalty, any lacking;
Not in service, any slacking.
He had left happy hearth;
Left the Dearest on earth;
He had gone where fell Destruction rages
His country to obey.
She had followed him to where they to each other bade adieu;
She had bravely smiled when waving last her hand, like heroes do.
And to cheer days then long,
Faith and love breathed a song;
And in letters to him in the pages
Somewhere was found her lay: --

REFRAIN

"O you will come back to me
From across the booming sea,
To these arms which miss you,
For these lips to kiss you!
And my love will stronger grow,--
For you will prove true, I know,--
While to God, I'm praying,
'Bring my darling home!

Many millions of men,
Went the Right to defend;
And women too were countless
Who, facing War, stood dauntless
And the sweethearts were there,
Forcing back every tear! --
O, the letters to those boys, none other
But the true could have sent.
And, one night I saw a little child beside its mother's knee,
As it prayed for absent Papa, angels bent that sight to see! --
Who could doubt in that hour
Unseen mercy and power? --
For, together Baby and its mother
Sang with a faith unspent:
