There's a storm-ripped stretch of ocean, Where the Dutchman's U-Boats trade. There's a young patrol from the big, round Bowl! On the day that The Game is played. "Aim!" The sig - nal pass - es!
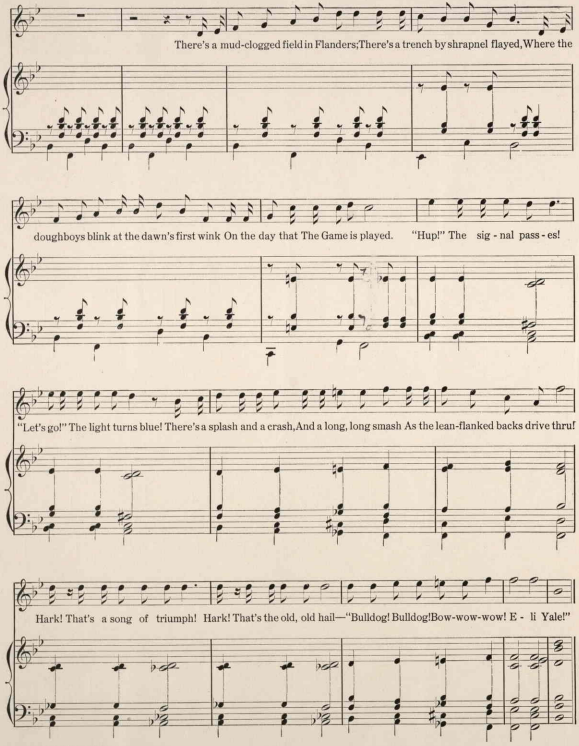
"Fire!" The shot goes true! There's a swish, and a swash, And a gurgling squash As the lean-flanked backs drive thru!
Hark! There's a song on the water That floats from the victor's rail—"Bulldog! Bulldog! Bow-wow-wow! E - li Yale!"
"Hold 'Em Yale."



There's a mud-clogged field in Flanders;There's a trench by shrapnel flayed,Where the doughboys blink at the dawn's first wink On the day that The Game is played. "Hup!" The sig - nal pass - es!
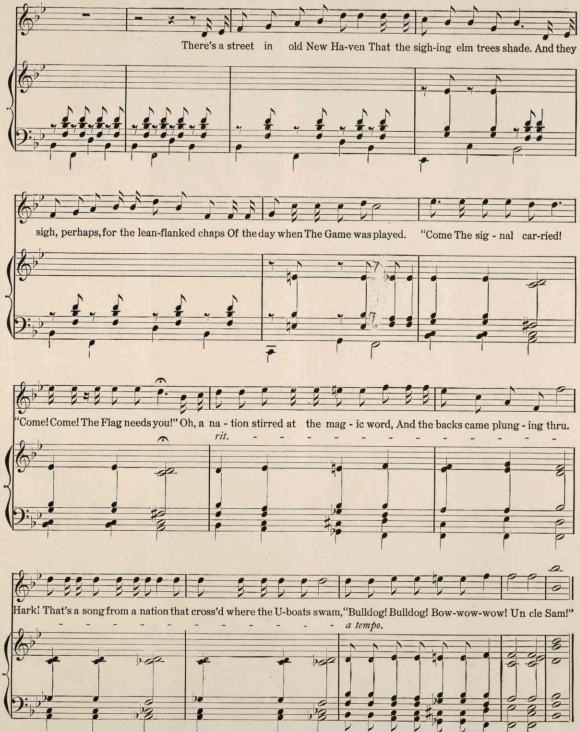
"Let's go!" The light turns blue! There's a splash and a crash,And a long, long smash As the lean-flanked backs drive thru!
Hark! That's a song of triumph! Hark! That's the old, old hail—"Bulldog! Bulldog!Bow-wow-wow! E - li Yale!"
"Hold 'Em Yale."



"Hold 'Em Yale."
