When England Remembers, May Erin Forget

Words by W. T. SLEEMAN.

Music by LEO FRIEDMAN.

Fare-well to the streams that leap down to the o - cean, No Long, long have I loved you, Ma - vour - neen, Ma - vour - neen, And Fare-well, O fare-well, how my bo - som is burn - ing, For more may thy val - leys ex - ult with the strain, That love of thee sends me far o - ver the foam, The E - rin my E - rin, is fad - ing from sight, It flowed from the heart of a sol - dier of E - rin, Who sun that un - fet - ters the le - gions of free - dom, Shall sinks in the sea as the sun in the heav - ens, And leaves thee yet finds that the part - ing is pain.

 find me when set - ting a day near - er home.
 leaves me to sigh in the shad - ows of night.

CHORUS.

Since Eng - land re - mem - bers how E - rin has striv - en, And weeps for the wounds that in blind - ness were set, May each be for - giv - ing and each be - for - giv - en, When

Eng - land re - mem - bers may E - rin for - get.
