AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

The roots of the present lie deep in the past, and nothing in the past is dead to the man who would learn how the present came to be what it is.

EXPLANATIONS.

1. Names of towns in New Hampshire are not often followed by N. H., the initials of the name.
2. When several children are born in the same place, the name of the town is given with the first, and not repeated after the name of each child.
3. Dates before 1752 are in Old Style; and when double dates are given, from January 1st to March 25th, I use the last figures to indicate the historical in preference to the civil and ecclesiastical year, which began March 25th. When during that period only one date is found, the year is uncertain, and in different records a different year may be named.
4. Abbreviations: abt., about; ae., aged; b., born; bapt., baptized; unm., unmarried; rem., removed; res., resided or residence; s., son; dau., daughter; w., wife; ch., children; s. p. (sine prole), without issue.
5. The small index figure at the right of a name denotes the generation of the person, dating from Edward Chapman of Ipswich.
6. Families are numbered in order, and large figures at the left of a name refer to the number of the family on pages following.
7. The children of a family are numbered by Roman numerals, I, II, III, etc. These numbers are not always in the same order as their births. The grandchildren are numbered by Arabic figures, 1, 2, 3, etc. Great grandchildren by 1), 2), 3), etc.
8. The names of those who died under 21 years of age are often omitted in the index.
9. Passages enclosed in brackets, with an interrogation point, as [ ?]?, are doubtful.
10. In spelling I usually follow the briefest and latest form, spelling names of earlier generations as I suppose they wrote them.

11. I would gladly have given more extensive notices of prominent and useful persons, but I have been compelled to condense and abridge the materials in my hands so as to bring the expense of the work within the reach of those who are interested in their family history, and yet do not feel able to expend much to perpetuate the memory of their honored ancestry and relatives.

JACOB CHAPMAN.
PREFACE.

In concluding the last of five volumes of family history, upon which I have spent the best part of fifteen years, I would express my thanks to the hundreds who have aided me in collecting materials for these volumes. For those who feel no interest in their ancestors, or only enough to erect a stone over their ashes, I have no reproaches. I never believed in the perfection of human nature. It runs in a narrow groove, and, if not aided, takes the downward track. Too many float with the current, and seem to care little about whence they came or whither they are going. Still it must be confessed that for what we have, and for what we are, we are deeply indebted to others who have gone before us. If we build higher than they, it is because they laid foundations for us. If we deny our obligations to them, we exhibit our ingratitude and our folly. I once knew a man who patiently toiled for many years to obtain an excellent farm and buildings for an only son, who, when he inherited the same, is said to have exclaimed,—"What is the use of giving one a farm if you do not give him the money to run it with!" There are probably still some persons like that "profane person Esau" who despised his birthright.

I suppose we are all by nature selfish and ungrateful. If we do not love our Father in heaven, is it reasonable to expect that we shall feel much interest in our earthly ancestors? How can we feel much interest in those to whom we are indebted for our earthly existence, if we know nothing about them? To satisfy ourselves with the fleeting objects of the present hour, does not do much credit to our minds or our hearts.

This work has been prepared with much labor and expense, to perpetuate upon the printed page the names and the virtues of seven or eight generations of a quiet family, some branches of which are already extinct, and can live only on the page of history and in the influences they imparted to others. I expect no pecuniary return for the labor I have expended, and shall be thankful if I receive a fourth part of the money paid out; but it will probably go into hundreds of families and into public libraries, for the benefit of the present and of future generations, so that those of the family who care about their forefathers and their distant relatives may, at a small expense, obtain much aid in prosecuting their researches.

I cannot but believe that in future generations there will be not a few who will be grateful for these records, many of which would have been lost if they had not been collected in the century now closing. Any intelligent reader may gain some idea of the difficulty of such a task, if he will undertake to collect and arrange the records of any family for two hundred and fifty years, when more than nine out of ten of the members have long lain in their graves and have been forgotten for years, and when not a few of their own posterity are unwilling to render any aid in rescuing from oblivion the names of their ancestors, and perpetrating the memory of their labors and their virtues.

It is hard to believe that a human being can be willing to forget the persons from whom he has received his life and a better part of his possessions; but it may be true. If we have advanced in the progress of time so rapidly as to lose sight of our ancestors and ignore our parentage, we may think much of ourselves, but probably few others will agree with us. Excessive refinement may tend to barbarism, but if we carefully look backward, we shall find the past constantly throwing its light on the present and on the future. Our eyes must be dim and our ears dull if we perceive nothing profitable in the wisdom and the virtues and even the follies of those who have gone before us.

If any ever call this work my folly, it will not trouble me. An infidel once said,—"When a man is dead, no matter whether he is sunk in the ocean or in a mud-hole." But if you will visit his grave, you will probably find standing over his ashes a marble monument, erected in accordance with his own wishes. Why not so? What human being who has led a decent life is willing to be entirely forgotten by all his friends and relatives?
Every man wishes to be himself remembered, but how many are willing to aid in perpetuating the memory of others?

"Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them."—Matt. vii:12. What can be the harm of cherishing the memory of our departed friends and relatives? If they had their failings, so have we our failings, and a knowledge of their defects may warn us to avoid the same; a knowledge of their virtues may encourage us to imitate them. If we imagine we have inherited any bad blood, still let us remember we should have had no blood at all, nor even a name to live, if they had not lived before us. If any of us were born in the humble walks of life, we need not be ashamed of the fact, for we have so much more room to rise and excel those to whom we are indebted for life and for the opportunities which life has afforded.

Wherever the Word of God has been received, and men have erected houses for His worship, they have prepared cemeteries for the repose of the dead. Among the pious Germans the burying-ground beside the church is a consecrated spot, and is called "Gottes Acker." Is there any other place more sacred than the memory of those who have loved and respected us in life? If we have any true regard for the memory of the friends whom God has taken from us, we shall not undervalue the records needed to aid us in preserving the knowledge of them.

Such thoughts excited my feelings in childhood, when my dearest friend was taken away, and they have not ceased to animate me in the protracted labors of the closing years of a long life, so that with no regret for the expense I have incurred, and with no ill-will to those who have troubled me, I can lay down the pen and leave the results of my labors in the hands of those interested in my work.

Whatever imperfections others may find in this volume, it is probable I have found still more. With all its defects and errors, I am inclined to think that intelligent and impartial readers will not deny the fact that I have performed a work in this field which no one heretofore has hardly attempted, and that I have collected materials which no genealogists of this family for a century to come can afford to neglect.

JACOB CHAPMAN.
NOTE.

I very much regret that I cannot print the records of some twenty or thirty families supposed to be descended from Nathaniel Chapman (Edw. 1) of Ipswich, Mass., and of Kittery, Me., mostly located in Maine. These records were sent to Mr. Thurston and Mr. Chapman, and they have doubtless been able to make many important additions to them, as I have requested others to send records to them. To publish these records, collected in the last seven years, without the additions which are in their hands, would not be agreeable to them, nor satisfactory to the members of these families; so it seems necessary that, for the present, I keep in manuscript these and the records I received from C. B. Gerard, Esq., of Anderson, Ind. If Mr. Thurston, or any one, publishes a supplement to my work, these in my hands may, perhaps, afford them some valuable aid.

INTRODUCTION.

EDWARD CHAPMAN AND FAMILY.

The name Chapman is common in England and in the United States. Some twenty of the name came to New England before the year 1700.* The name comes from the Anglo-Saxon, Ceapman, which means a trader or merchant. In German it is Kaufmann, with the same definition, supposed to have been given to certain persons on account of their occupations.

Most of those who in the seventeenth century came to New England came from the north-east part of England, from Yorkshire, Lincolnshire, etc. Tradition says that Edward Chapman, of Ipswich, Mass., came from the vicinity of Hull, in England, and that the other three families in Ipswich were not nearly connected with him. He seems to have settled in Rowley, and then purchased land in what is now Linebrook parish, at a distance of some miles from the present village of Ipswich. Though a miller by trade, he engaged in farming.

Rev. Nathaniel Rogers, of Ipswich, came from England in 1636. His kinsman, Rev. Ezekiel Rogers and colony, from Rowley, Yorkshire, in England, sailed from Hull in 1638, and landed in Boston, Mass., where they were on the 10th mo., 2d day. In April, 1639, they began to settle Rowley, Mass., six miles from Ipswich. Edward Chapman, the emigrant, is supposed to have been in that colony, or to have joined it soon after. In 1642 he married (1) Mary (dau. Mark Symonds), the mother of his five children. For some years he lived on the farm of Rev. Nathaniel Rogers, of Ipswich. In 1644 he was a grantee of Ipswich.†

* In 1662, 10th mo., 7th day, a house and garden in Marblehead was sold to one Edward Chapman and William Bartol, both of Marblehead.
† In 1664, 10th mo., 1st day, one Edward Chapman had d., and his widow Joane, administratrix, had m. John Cadner (v. Deeds, Salem Series, 7: 149).
In the record of a deed (3: 9) Edward is spelled Edmund which is probably a clerical error.
INTRODUCTION.

In 1634 John Chapman was a resident of Boston. In April, 1635, Ralph Chapman, of Southwark county, Surrey, in England, ae. 20, left England in the ship Elizabeth, of London. In 1640 he was a resident of Duxbury, Mass., where he received grants of land. In 1645-56 he kept a ferry at North river, Scituate, Mass. In 1876 a genealogy of his family was printed by C. B. Gerard, Esq., now of Anderson, Ind.

In 1663 one Robert Chapman, of Oyster river, in Dover, N. H., lost a young child. I have not learned that he had any other children.

In 1682 William Chapman, of Ipswich, and w. Elisabeth had a son William and two daughters.

In 1695 Nathaniel Chapman, of Ipswich, and w. Mary had upon the records the names of two sons, Michael and David, and three daughters. In 1715 Nathaniel and his w. Elisabeth were on record, with sons Anthony, b. 9 Aug. 1713, and Robert, b. 18 Nov. 1715.

In 1718, Dec. 20, John Chapman (s. of Samuel and Abigail) was born.

On 30 Nov. 1728, Daniel Chapman and Abigail Dutch were married, and had four daughters before April, 1730.

Though he is called a miller, Edward Chapman seems to have preferred the occupation of a farmer. While occupying the farm of Mr. Rogers he invested his spare capital in purchasing... lands in different parts of Ipswich, using not only his own funds but the property left to his children by Mark Symonds, their grandfather. He believed that his children, with his aid, ought to support themselves till he could conveniently divide among them his own estate, together with what was left for them by their grandfather.

All went apparently well till his son Nathaniel married Mary Wilborn, and then sued his father for the fifth part of the property left to the children of his mother, Mary (Symonds) Chapman. Then, by mutual consent, the question was left to Dea. Moses Pingry, Lyman Stacy of Ipswich, and Ezekiel Northend of Rowley, who divided the land into five equal parts, and Nathaniel Chapman chose his share according to his birth. But it seems that the other heirs left their shares in the care of their father. He was an industrious, energetic Christian, cautious, firm, and decided in his opinions, who preferred to keep his property in his own hands till his children learned to earn their living and take care of their own earnings.
GRADUATES AT DARTMOUTH COLLEGE NAMED CHAPMAN.

In 1681 he bought a house in Hog lane, Ipswich, but probably worked at his trade in different places. We find no family record of his children, but the researches of L. B. \((15)\) III. SAMUEL,\(^4\) b. 7 Dec. 1706, m. (1) ——— YORK, settled abt. 1730 in Newmarket, a farmer, had 12 children.

\(^*\) Job Chapman was a quiet, peaceable citizen, fond of reading, interested in politics; but not eager for wealth, nor ambitious for office. He held some offices in his native town, Greenland, and was for some years postmaster in Tamworth. It was said that after the decease of his mother, contrary to her wishes, his brother Samuel took two thirds of his father's estate, and left but one third to Job, his younger brother. I never heard that Job ever told of it, but it could not be concealed.

\(^†\) See Philbrook Genealogy, p. 66.
He seems to have been successful in business and a man of influence in Newmarket. He m. (2) abt. 1760, a widow with children, and rem. to Stratham, where he was for years a prominent citizen, active in town affairs. Late in life he lost his property by trusting others, and rem. with one Daniels, who had m. his youngest dau., Hannah (Chapman), to the new town, Danville, in northern Vermont. There, in a cold climate and in destitute circumstances, aided at times by the contributions of his children in Newmarket, he spent his last days, living till nearly 90 yrs. old. His letters, graphically describing the sufferings of the early settlers in that new country, were preserved many years by the relatives he had left in Newmarket.

IV. Martha, b. 9 Sept. 1708, res. with her brother Paul, and d. unm. in the family of her nephew, Job Chapman, Greenland, 1767, ae. 59.

In early life he was clerk of the proprietors of Epsom. In 1776 he bought of Jas. Bean a place in Raymond, which in 1788 he sold to his son Samuel. He had 4 children, whose names I have found, and probably others.

(17) VI. *Joseph, b. 10 June 1713, a cordwainer, settled with his brother Samuel in Newmarket abt. 1730, where he res. till 1748, m. (1) Mary Winn, and had a large family, though we find no family records. After much perplexing research, I have found some 8 persons who were probably his children.

VII. Benjamin, bap. 1717, res. in Greenland in 1747. I find no record of any family belonging to him.

* For some twelve years, from 1733 to 1734, he res. in Exeter, where several of his ch. were born; then he removed to Epsom, where he had purchased land, which in 1768 he sold to Simon Chapman, probably his son. In 1769 one Joseph Chapman was a citizen of Wakefield, and owned land there and in Rochester, to which he had rem. in 1762. In 1763 he was again in Exeter (for a man of the same name), whence he rem. in or near 1781 to Mt. Vernon, or Vienna, Me., near the line between the towns. This Joseph Chapman by his w. Mary Moore of Dover had 9 ch., 5 of them b. in New Hampshire and 4 in Maine. It is possible that Joseph Chapman who m. Mary Moore of Dover was a son of Joseph Chapman. I put the record of this family in the Appendix.
VIII. Jonathan, 4 bapt. 1719, res. in Greenland in 1747, probably attended church in Rye, where his w. Mary [Libbee]? and his dau. Salina were baptized in 1750, and a dau., Phoebe, April 12, 1752. In 1751 he bought land in Barrington, where he lived in 1761. In 1767, March 10, he owned a farm in Epsom, and had a s., Anthony, who d. before 1780. He is said to have had a s., Paul, b. 2. John, 6 bapt. Epping, 1755, settled in Concord.
5. A small eh. not named, 5 but was bapt. 1788 of adult age.

X. Abigail, 4 b. 1721, d. unm. Greenland, 13 Oct. 1754, ae. 33. It is supposed that she, her brother Paul, and two of his sons, d. of throat distemper, an epidemic which visited many places with terrible fatality at that period.

* Though Job Chapman and his wife Penelope were not in full connection with the Congregational church, they probably considered themselves Christians, had their children baptized, and encouraged them to attend public worship. When they had become aged and feeble, it seemed to them a great privilege to have their pastor, Rev. Samuel Hidden, appoint a week-day lecture at their house, where their children and grandchildren might meet, with some of the neighbors, who did not often go to the house of God on the Sabbath.

Samuel Chapman was, from the age of 12 yrs., a sufferer from asthma, which confined him much at home. His fondness for books and reading made his home more pleasant and profitable for his children, and his regret at their leaving home was alleviated by the fact that they were anxious to acquire an education. * It is said that when David Chapman was 21 yrs. old he commenced business for himself. When the assessor called for the inventory of his taxable property he gave it as $1,000, money at interest, and though he had none, he paid a tax on $1,000 till he was able to show that amount in his possession. At the day appointed for his marriage he did not appear. The disappointed friends returned, and a messenger was sent to inquire for David, who was found safe and well. When EliphaZ Chapman left the pulpit, removed to the wilderness, and devoted his energy to the self denying labor of turning a portion of the forest into fruitful fields, many probably condemned his course. But could they look at the subject in the light of one hundred years following, they could not fail to see the hand of Providence in the movement. Who can estimate the importance of such a work in such a place? Think of the influence of his eight sons and daughters, trained up in the way they should go, under the guiding hands of Christian parents, whose influence has continued to this day, and will not cease for centuries to come. The first settlers in any new place, if their lives are prolonged, may accomplish much to give character to the generations following. We see, in the West, illustrations of this fact.

And for my outward estate, God hath graciously lent unto me, I dispose as followeth: viz. My beloved wife, there being a covenant & contract between us, upon marriage, My will is that it be faithfully fulfilled, twenty pounds of that contained in the covenant to be in such household goods as she shall desire.

Also my will is that my beloved wife, Dorothy Chapman shall have the use of the parlour end of the house, both upper & lower rooms, with the little cellar that hath lock & key to it, with free liberty of the oven & well of water, with ten good bearing fruit trees near that end of the house where she is to have the use of & to have the fruit of them.

My son Symon, having already done for him beyond my other children, My will is, that he shall have thirty pounds paid him, by my executor, as followeth, viz. to be pay'd five pounds a year, to begin the first five pounds, three years after my decease, & five pounds every year, next after, & this to be his full portion. And for four pounds that is coming to him, of his Grandfather, Symonds' gift which is yet behynd, my will is that it shall be payed unto him, out of that six acre lott, lying at Wattells neck, where was his grand-father's, as it shall be prized by indifferent men.

NOTE II.

Samuel Chapman was a man of piety and influence in the community. In May, 1719, he presented to the council of New Hampshire a petition for a meeting-house, etc., to be erected in the part of the town called North Hill. It was granted, notwithstanding the opposition of the selectmen of Hampton. But owing to unforeseen difficulties, the separate organization was not completed, nor the new meeting-house finished, till 17 Nov. 1738, sixteen years after his death.*

Four years after forming the Second church in Hampton, the town of North Hampton was incorporated, 26 Nov. 1742. Rev. Nathaniel Gookin, son of a former pastor at Hampton, was ordained and settled over this new parish, 31 Nov. 1739, where he remained twenty-seven years, till he was removed by death, 22 Oct. 1766. It was said by old people living within the period of my recollection, that his sermons, previous to the great earthquake of 1755, were very impressive, that they contained not only faithful warnings, but some remarkable predictions.

NOTE III.

Jacob Chapman was born in Tamworth, N. H., the eldest son of a farmer. In early life he had few opportunities for mental improvement. His parents commenced life with no capital and but fifty acres of land, and needed most of their time and strength to provide for themselves and for the material wants of the children that were given them. The common schools in the district were short and insufficient. When he was eleven years of age, his mother, lying on her death-bed, called him to her side and told him, for the first time, that his parents had indulged the hope that they might give him a liberal education; but she added, "Now I am to be taken away from you, and I see no prospect that our plans can ever be realized." She exhorted him to be faithful in his duties to his God, to his father, and to his younger brothers and sisters. She could leave them all in the care of her Heavenly Father, with the assurance that He doeth all things well. No child at that early age could fully appreciate the value of the advice which fell from such feeble lips, which were soon to close in the silence of death.

More than seventy years have passed, and yet these words have not ceased to echo in the ears upon which they fell, so that she "being dead, yet speaketh." Owing to his father's ill health, he became more responsible for the care of his motherless brothers and sisters. For years his highest ambition was to be able, by manual labor, to obtain an honest living and to acquire the means to purchase a few books. In fact, there were many books that seemed to fascinate him. It was the complaint of his father, that when he got hold of a book he could not see nor hear nor think of anything else. There was too much cause for the complaint.

In the fall of 1826 a select school was opened at the centre of the town, three miles from the farm, and Jacob was permitted to attend and commence the study of Latin, walking over the hills six miles a day for twelve weeks.

In 1827 he spent one term at Exeter academy, taught school the winter following, and then returned to the academy, remaining till 1831, when he entered Dartmouth college, teaching every winter.

In 1835-36, he taught at Lyndon, Vt., one year in the academy, and then entered the theological seminary at Andover, Mass., graduating in 1839; then taught two years at North Bridgton, Me.
He married there, Mary C. (dau. Hon. Nath'l) Howe, who was born in 1814. She was his assistant in the academy, had been a teacher for years in Bethel, Norridgewock, and other places, and had impaired her health.

While in college, he hoped to devote his life to labor in a missionary field, and in 1836 offered his services to the board as a teacher in Turkey; but ill health prevented him.

In 1841 he started on a journey to labor as a home missionary in the West; but was taken sick, confined at Andover, Mass., till able to return. When able to preach again, he was called to the church in Pelham, N. H.; but after six months, was again laid aside by sickness. In 1843 he took charge of an academy in Myerstown, Penn., with permission to preach whenever he might think it his duty. In 1846 he was elected professor in Franklin college, Lancaster, Penn. In 1850, when this college was united with Marshall college, he became principal of Harrisburg academy. In June, 1845, he had been ordained an evangelist at Fryeburg, Me., and had been often called to preach in the pulpits of different denominations. The labor in two professions, and the malarious atmosphere on the banks of the Susquehanna river, gave him chills and fever; and he resigned, to become pastor of the Congregational church in Marshall, Clark county, Ill., where he remained twelve years, suffering often from the disease of that climate. He was one year professor in Terre Haute Female college, and preached a year at Onarga, Ill.

Returning to New England, he preached a few months at South Paris, Me., and then for six years was pastor in Deerfield, N. H., where his labors were blessed and more members were added to the church than in twenty-four years previous, fifty being received in twelve months. Here Mrs. Chapman died, April 6, 1869.

The severe labor of preaching—often three times on the Sabbath—and visiting in a parish extending diagonally nine miles one way by ten miles the other, was too much for his strength, and he removed in 1872 to the smaller parish of Kingston, where he remained till 1873, when advanced age led him to retire from the pastorate, and he settled in Exeter. He still continued to act as an occasional supply for destitute churches till more than eighty-three years old. He had married (2) on the 14 Sept. 1871, Mary E. (dau. Charles) Lane of Stratham.

For many years he had been collecting materials for a history of the families of his grandparents, and "The Family of William Lane of Boston, 1648," from whom Mrs. Chapman descended.
NOTE IV.

Members of the Chapman family who sent me records some years ago have a right to inquire why I delay this work so long. Though it is unpleasant to publish the facts, I suppose they have a right to know some of the reasons which have caused this long delay.

I commenced the work more than twenty-five years ago. In 1878, a part of my unfinished records was printed in Portland, in connection with records collected by others. This rendered it inexpedient for me to print, for some years, what I had additional; but I continued collecting more extensive records during the fifteen years, while I was preparing for the press four volumes of family history, upon the "Folsom Family," the "Philbrick Family," "Leonard Weeks and His Descendants," and Vol. I of "Lane Genealogies."

Then I resumed work upon the "Family of Edward Chapman of Ipswich." Mr. Thurston, otherwise engaged, declined to print it, and Mr. Templeton of Exeter agreed to do the job. On the 4th of August, 1892, before the manuscript was ready for the press, Thurston wrote me again, saying,—"I will agree to your terms—three hundred copies, size and type of page like Lane Genealogy," etc. And, again, "I would like the copy soon; shall go right to work upon it." Templeton kindly released me from my agreement with him, and the manuscript was sent to Thurston of Portland. He did not begin to print it.

After waiting long, I found he was writing it over, upon his own plan and in his own style. I was sadly disappointed. I consulted several literary friends in Exeter and in Boston. Not one advised me to put my work in such a form. Not long after, Mr. Thurston met with an accident, which for several months confined him to his house and unfitted him for work. As I had received additional records which I wished to incorporate in my manuscript, I requested him to return it to me, but he would not allow me the privilege, and put the manuscript into the hands of L. B. Chapman, who declined to let me have it. As it might require a long legal process to recover my property, I commenced writing it over again, and had labored about four months, when, by the aid of legal counsel, I recovered the main part of what I had sent him. As Thurston positively refused to print it in the form I had written it (though I allowed him to correct any errors which he might find in my text, and offered him twenty dollars additional to add twenty pages in the form of notes, etc.), and as he told me I might not live to see it printed, I could see no other way to publish what I had promised so long ago, but to put the manuscript in the hands of another printer, who has faithfully performed his work according to his promise.
