Library of Congress Publications on Africa, 1965–1984 719

Preface

This guide focuses on publications relating to sub-Saharan Africa issued by or for United States government agencies in the period 1976–80. It updates that part of the Library of Congress's 1978 study, The United States and Africa: Guide to U.S. Official Documents and Government-Sponsored Publications on Africa, 1785–1975 (entry 27 of the present guide) concerning nations south of the Sahara and cites a number of titles issued in 1973–75 that were not recorded in the earlier compilation. Also included is a selection of documents with 1981 or 1982 imprints that cover events, programs, or developments of the 1976–80 period. The guide is based on holdings of the Library of Congress, other collections in the Washington, D.C. area, and selected titles in other American libraries. Material in the Library of Congress is indicated by call numbers for cataloged works in the general collections, by the symbol DLC for uncataloged items, or by symbols showing locations in special collections (see Key to Symbols). National Union Catalog symbols are used to indicate the location of many titles not in the Library of Congress but held by other libraries.

As access to a number of collections cited in this guide is restricted, the user should consult the holding library concerning the availability of the material for reference, photocopying, or interlibrary loan. Information on the accessibility of collections in the Washington area is given in the tenth edition of Library and Reference Facilities in the Area of the District of Columbia[1] and in two studies of the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars, Scholars' Guide to Washington, D. C., for African Studies (entry 29) and Scholars' Guide to Washington, D.C., for Middle Eastern Studies (entry 29, note). Additional data on titles not identified as held by libraries in and around the nation's capital has been gathered from published guides such as the Monthly Catalog of United States Government Publications and A Survey of the United States Government's Investment in Africa (see Key to Sources), or from information supplied by forty-nine American libraries and documentation centers.

Entries are grouped by region, as in The United States and Africa, with further division by country and subject.[2] As in the earlier guide, the term government-sponsored publications has been interpreted broadly to include a wide range of studies issued under official contract by universities and other research centers, prepared with financial support from one or more government agencies, or reproduced or translated by the government. Many contract studies indicate that authors are given wide latitude in expressing their own views, interpretations, and conclusions. As an example, the preface of The Uprooted of the Western Sahel (entry 3440), financed by the United States Agency for International Development (AID), notes that the authors had a "liberal mandate to treat the subject with intellectual independence. Neither the data nor the views expressed in the study represent the official views of the Agency for International Development or the U.S. Government."

The guide is limited to unclassified documents. Titles marked restricted, confidential, or official use only, with no indication that they were subsequently declassified, are not included. Also omitted are congressional bills and resolutions, reports prepared for Congress by the Congressional Research Service, Library of Congress,[3] most preliminary or progress reports on government contracts, and material on the United States issued by American cultural centers in Africa. For background information on various government agencies cited in this bibliography and on their publications, useful guides are CIS Annual; Checklist of Congressional Hearings & Committee Prints; Government Reference Books; Guide to U.S. Government Publications; Index to U.S. Government Periodicals; U.S. Federal Official Publications: the International Dimension; and United States Government Manual (for full citations, see Key to Sources).

Documents recorded here reflect both the wide range and the depth of official American interest in nations south of the Sahara and in broad issues having an impact on Africa, such as drought relief, human rights, refugees, and the role of women in national development. Congressional concern is indicated by frequent references to African economic, political, and social problems in the Congressional Record, identified through its sessional indexes.[4] Reports on hearings and congressional study missions further express American policy and provide background material on major issues, among them the civil war in Angola, South African apartheid, conditions in Uganda, the evolution of Zimbabwe, and the Sahelian drought.

American economic, military, social, and technical assistance programs south of the Sahara are documented in printed and mimeographed studies issued by or for AID and other federal departments and agencies. Most documents prepared by AID's bureaus and offices or produced under their auspices by other agencies or nongovernment contractors have been identified from catalogs held by AID's Development Information Center and the Documentation Center of its Sahel Development Program. Additional citations have been supplied by libraries of various contractors, primarily universities and other research centers.

A major bibliographic development of the late 1970s and early 1980s has been the marked increase in the number of these contract studies available to researchers in microform. Many have been identified through A.I.D. Research & Development Abstracts (see Key to Sources), an annotated list indicating how copies can be obtained in paper form or microfiche, or through Sahel, a Guide to the Microfiche Collection of Documents and Dissertations (see Key to Sources), a guide primarily to material in the Sahel Documentation Center, Michigan State University, reproduced by University Microfilms International. Major sources of microforms of documents prepared by or for other government agencies were Resources in Education, issued by the Educational Resources Information Center (ERIC), American Statistics Index, by the Congressional Information Service, and Government Reports Announcements & Index, by the National Technical Information Service (NTIS) (see Key to Sources).[5] Citations to material prepared under military auspices have been taken in part from Africa; Selected References. Supplement (see Key to Sources), issued by the Air University Library.

Government-sponsored translations into English of periodical and newspaper articles constitute a major component of citations on certain regions and countries. Material translated or reproduced by the Joint Publications Research Service (JPRS) provides information on a wide range of economic, military, and political topics. As most of the articles come from Arabic, French, and Portuguese-language serials, a high proportion of the translations concern Sudan, French-speaking, or Portuguese-speaking states. As an aid to researchers in locating titles from which the translations were taken, a list of the major periodicals covered by JPRS is noted in JPRS Newspapers and Periodicals (p. xxi).[6]

Given the volume of documentation on sub-Saharan Africa issued by or for government agencies in recent years, there is little doubt that some important publications were inadvertently omitted from this compilation. As supplements are under consideration to bring it up to date, additions, corrections, or suggestions would be welcome.

During the course of this study, the compiler was aided by Library of Congress staff and by librarians and area specialists in other research centers. The Library's Science and Technology Division, Serial and Government Publications Division, Near Eastern and African Law Division, Microform Reading Room, and Congressional Research Service were especially supportive. Special thanks also go to the staffs of the following libraries and documentation centers in the Washington, D.C., area who facilitated the compiler's bibliographic research in their collections: African Bibliographic Center; Bureau of the Census Library; Center for International Research, Bureau of the Census; Development Information Center, AID; Division of Research Grants, and Library, National Endowment for the Humanities; Documentation Center, Sahel Development Program, AID; Export-Import Bank of the United States; Foreign Service Institute; General Accounting Office; Geological Survey; National Agricultural Library; National Library of Medicine; National Museum of African Art; Office of Women in Development, AID; Overseas Private Investment Corporation; Smithsonian Institution; United States Information Agency; and libraries of the departments of Commerce, Energy, Health and Human Services, Housing and Urban Development, Labor, State, and Transportation.

The compiler expresses his deep appreciation to the following universities and other research centers that contributed citations or other information to this study: Auburn University; California Institute of Technology; California State Library; California State Personnel Board; Center for Research on Economic Development, University of Michigan; Center for Technology, Environment, and Development, Clark University; Cornell University; Department of Anthropology, University of New Mexico; Food and Feed Grain Institute, Kansas State University; Georgia Institute of Technology; Hoover Institution on War, Revolution, and Peace; Indiana University; Institute for Communication Research, Stanford University; Institute for Development Anthropology; Institute for Health Policy Studies, University of California, San Francisco; International Center for Marine Resource Development, University of Rhode Island; International Fertilizer Development Center;

Notes

U.S. Library of Congress. Loan Division. Library and reference facilities in the area of the District of Columbia. [1st]+ ed.; 1943+ [Washington]
Z732.D62U63

Tenth ed., edited by Margaret S. Jennings and published for the American Society for Information Science in cooperation with Joint Venture by Knowledge Industry Publications, White Plains, N.Y. (1979. 258 p.)

2.
The arrangement of the guide follows the same basic geographic pattern as in The United States and Africa except that Chad is entered in the West Africa section because of that country's close involvement with programs relating to Sahelian drought relief and economic development. Western Sahara, usually identified with North Africa, is covered here because of its relationship to Mauritania.

3.
Studies of the Library's Congressional Research Service (CRS) are prepared exclusively for members and committees of Congress. Many are subsequently issued as committee prints, entered into published hearings of congressional committees, inserted into the Congressional Record, or on occasion published by private institutions. CRS documents made available in the public domain are cited in its CRS Studies in the Public Domain, which is available for sale from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402.

U.S. Congress. Congressional record; proceedings and debates of the Congress. 43d+ Mar. 4/26, 1873+ Washington, U.S. Govt. Print. Off.
J11.R5

Permanent ed. Issued for each session; the text is revised and rearranged from the daily ed.

An index is issued for each session which includes History of Bills and Resolutions.

At the time this guide was compiled, the index to the permanent edition was available through the 95th Congress, 2d session (1978). For subsequent sessions through the 96th Congress, 2d session (1980), the biweekly index to the daily edition (J11.R7) was used.

Citations in this guide taken from the Congressional Record (both permanent and daily editions) are limited to statements and extensions of remarks two pages or more in length.

With the growing availability of contract studies and other government reports through the microform distribution services of such organizations as AID, Educational Resources Information Center (ERIC), National Technical Information Service (NTIS), Congressional Information Service, and University Microfilms International, researchers may find that microfiche or microfilm copies of some documents cited in this guide are held by libraries in their areas, both in the United States and abroad. Researchers in Great Britain, for example, will find an excellent collection of U.S. government and government-sponsored publications at the Library, Institute of Development Studies, University of Sussex.

With some exceptions, only JPRS titles four or more pages in length are cited in this guide. Among the sources that index JPRS material, the most useful in this compilation were the Monthly Catalog of United States Government Publications (see Key to Sources) and the Bell & Howell Transdex Index, issued monthly with annual cumulations in microfiche (cumulations for 1974+ held by the Library of Congress). JPRS reports are held by the Library as follows: 1958–75 (no. 1– 65,120) in bound form in the general collections (AS36.U57);

1975+ (no. 65,120+) on microfiche in the Microform Reading Room; 1977+ (no. 68,872+) on microfiche in the Newspaper and Current Periodical Reading Room. Very recent issues (approximately the last two to three months) are held on paper, until replaced by microfiche, in the Newspaper and Current Periodical Reading Room.

A general introduction to the history, ethnology, languages, political development, and economic conditions of sub-Saharan Africa, with an outline of United States relations with nations of this region.

Table (p. 18), arranged by country, provides information on U.S. official development assistance under Agency for International Development, Public Law 480, Peace Corps, and Export-Import Bank programs for the period 1974–78, plus figures for the same period on assistance from other western nations (e.g., France, Great Britain, Federal Republic of Germany, Canada), oil-producing (OPEC) nations, and Communist states (Soviet Union, China, Eastern European countries).

Other tables give figures on Communist military personnel and economic technicians in certain sub-Saharan nations as of 1978 (p. 31) and on U.S. economic assistance to Africa in the 1979–81 period in terms of bilateral aid and the American share of multilateral aid programs (p. 33).

The Appendix (p. 35–45) includes tables, by country, on population growth rates, population density, life expectancy, major ethnic and religious groups, literacy levels, labor force, gross domestic product, and trade.

Note: The text of this Discussion Paper, with an added introduction but without the appendix, appears also in The Department of State Bulletin, v. 80, no. 2036, Mar. 1980, p. 1–28, and v. 80, no. 2037, Apr. 1980, p. 1–30 (JX232.A33, v. 80).

Refugee movement within the Horn of Africa, by Susan Enea [et al.] Washington, International Demographic Data Center, U.S. Bureau of the Census, 1980. 204 leaves. DLC

Bibliography: leaves 197–204.

"This report attempts to estimate refugee movement within the Horn of Africa to the year 1980, to project alternative future refugee movement to the year 1983, and to discuss the demographic impact of this movement on the countries within the Horn of Africa. Traditionally, the Horn is considered to be a region of East Africa bounded to the north by the Red Sea and to the east by the Indian Ocean and comprises the nations of Ethiopia, Djibouti, and Somalia. The Democratic Republic of the Sudan is also considered to be part of the Horn in this report, because the Sudan has been and continues to be integrally related to the culture and history of the region."—p. "The Government of Kenya, with international assistance, has been engaged since 1968 in a long-term project to develop the livestock resources of the country. Under the first phase of the project, a cooperative agreement between Kenya's Ministry of Agriculture and the U.S. Agency for International Development provided for a survey to evaluate the water resources of the North Eastern Province and for the development of plans for the optimum utilization of range lands and available water resources in selected areas of the province. The present report, largely concerned with ground water, is based on the findings of the water-resources investigation undertaken under Phase I (1968–1973) of the project."—Abstract.

Zimbabwe

Note: Until 1979, the country was called Rhodesia in most publications, although it was established in the Library of Congress as Southern Rhodesia (cataloged under Rhodesia, Southern); for an explanation of the U.S. Government's position on the official name during the 1965–79 period, see The United States and Africa; Guide to U.S. Official Documents and Government-Sponsored Publications of Africa, 1785–1975 (Z3501.W57), p. 566, note under "Southern Rhodesia." For simplicity, Rhodesia is used in the text of the present guide. In June 1979, in the wake of an internal settlement and general elections, the name Zimbabwe-Rhodesia was adopted. After a constitutional conference in London, it reverted temporarily to colonial status in December 1979 as Southern Rhodesia. Following successful all-party general elections in February 1980, the independent nation of Zimbabwe was proclaimed on April 18, 1980.

United States—Economic Sanctions

Note: The following items (entries 2975–3030), listed chronologically by year, concern the issue of economic sanctions by the United States against the minority-controlled government of Rhodesia (Zimbabwe-Rhodesia after the April 1979 elections). The issue of sanctions with respect to certain designated commodities, including chrome ore, had been a major concern of the U.S. Government since 1966; (see The United States and Africa: Guide to U.S. Official Documents and Government-Sponsored Publications on Africa, 1785–1975 (Z3501.W57), especially entries 6034–6107). Key dates in the continuing debate after 1975 are Mar. 18, 1977, when the United States reimposed the ban on the importation of Rhodesian chrome, and Dec. 16, 1979, when President Carter lifted them five days before an agreement was signed in London which introduced an interim British administration and paved the way for an independent Zimbabwe. "Ghana is one African country that has recognized its population problem, promulgated an official population policy, and established a family planning program. The United States has provided about 75 percent of the $15.9 million of population assistance to Ghana. Ghana's program, however, has reached only a small percentage of the population, primarily urban. GAO believes changes are needed if the population growth rate is to be lowered significantly and recommends actions the Agency [for International Development] should take, including integration of population and development assistance, to meet this object."—Cover.

"In 1978 the Government of the Islamic Republic of Mauritania and the United States Agency for International Development embarked on a very substantial undertaking to provide the Mauritanian central planning group with a head start on the drafting of the Fourth Plan of Social and Economic Development (1981–1985). An expatriate team of specialists was to assist in the identification of a development strategy and alternate paths of achieving it. In view of the almost total lack of adequate data and analytical bases for the task, the project called for a series of underlying studies to produce information on manpower and employment, the resources and production systems of the rural sector, and its diverse ethnic groups—how they function socially and economically. The combined effort is titled Rural Assessment and Manpower Survey, known widely by its acronym RAMS."—Foreword.

Western Sahara

Note: In mid- 1983, the issues of the legal status and sovereignty of the former Spanish Sahara were unresolved. Moroccan occupation of the entire territory, following Mauritania's abandonment of its claims in 1979, was opposed by forces of the Saharan Arab Democratic Republic, proclaimed in 1976 by Polisario (Frente Popular para la Liberación de Saguia el Hamra y Río de Oro), the principal organization resisting Moroccan-Mauritanian rule. In U.S. Government publications, the term "Western Sahara" is used to indicate the entire region.

Index

Note: This index combines personal and corporate authors, subjects, and titles in one alphabetical sequence, with numbers referring to entries in the text. Names of political leaders not established in Library of Congress catalogs are entered according to the form of name given in Chiefs of State and Cabinet Members of Foreign Governments (JF37.U5; entry 816). For names of universities and other institutions of higher learning not established in the Library, the thirty-third (1982–83) edition of The World of Learning (AS2.W6) served as the primary source. United States government agencies are entered according to the latest form of entry established in the Library. Subject headings are based on the ninth edition (1980) of Library of Congress Subject Headings (Z695.U4749 1980), augmented to meet the specific requirements of this compilation.
