

Thomas Jefferson to James Monroe, March 12,
1793, from Thomas Jefferson and James Monroe
Correspondence, Transcribed and Edited by Gerard W.
Gawalt, Manuscript Division, Library of Congress

Thomas Jefferson to James Monroe

Mar. 12. 1793

The following suits were put into the hands of Mr N. Pope in 1791 to wit.

Against Lewis & Woodson on bond principal & interest to Sep. 30, 1791 were £SD

192 129½

against Woodson on his NoteDoTo do7 142

against Lewis on Account of rent balance & interest to Sep. 30, 1791 8670½

286140

Out of these monies when recovered the following orders were given in favr. of Donald, Scott & co. principal & interest to Sep. 30. 9113900

Of Wm & James Donald do.to do.38136

177136

left a balance of10000

Library of Congress

An order for this balance was given in favor of Dobson: but as his departure from the country required prompter payment, prompter resources were resort to for him, of which I adressed Mr. Pope by letter of Sep. 25.92. so as to leave this balance free.

Mr. Pope by letter of Jan. 3. 93 informs me has judgments against Lewis and Woodson & execution, which has been replevied; and that the suits against Lewis had been ready for trial, but delayed by the inability of Colo. N. Lewis to attend as a witness: but that he should have judgments the next term. The balances with interest will be upwards of £120.

Mr. N. Pope always giving priority to the orders in favor of Donald, Scott & co.& James Donald, is desired to pay the residue of the money he may receive on the above accounts(clear of costs) to Colo. Monroe or order, or such portion of the residue as Colo. Monroe shall apply for to be disposed of for my uses.Th. Jefferson

P.S. No notice is taken above of the suit ordered against Lewis and Ware, because it was countermanded.

FC (Jefferson Papers, Library of Congress).